MAGAZINE REVIEW.

A Noisy Stamp.

O. Henry, the author, vouches for the following:

An effeminate young man daintily placed two cents on a drug-store counter and asked the clerk for a stamp. The clerk tore one off and slid it over to him. The young man drew an envelope from his pocket.

"Would you mind licking it for me and placing it on here?" he lisped.

"Sure," said the clerk, as he started to stamp the letter.

"Oh, stay!" cautioned the young man in great alarm. "Not that way, I beg of you. Kindly place the stamp with the top towards the outer edge of the envelope."

"Sure," said the obliging clerk. "But what in thunder's that for?"

"Why, you see," confided the youth blushing, "I'm a student in the Cosmopolitan Corresponding School and that's our college yell."—"The Chestnut Tree," in the June Everybody's.

DRAWING IN CITY SCHOOLS.

Exhibit Starts at Mathewson Building To-morrow.

It is hoped that all the pupils parents and friends of the schools will make a special effort to attend the drawing exhibit which opens Friday at 3 p. m., as announced in another column.

The people of Barre do not need to be reminded of the value of this department in an industrial city. Boys are already securing places in their drafting offices, and those who are taking the engineering course at the universities are ranking high because they know how to draw as well as compute. But drawing has two other values seldom taken into account. It trains the critical judgment and the power to appreciate the beautiful. As a proof of the former, one of the grammar grade teachers volunteers the statement that she can get her pupils to think more during the drawing period than in any other exercise. Every time a pupil compares tones, shapes or measures, estimates proportions or distances, decides upon spacing or suitability, measures or plans his drawing in the right way, he is training his observation and judgment for greater tasks in the future.

President Elliott of Harvard says that "after reading, spelling, writing and ciphering with small numbers and in simple operations, drawing should be the most important common school subject." He declares that it is monstrous for a school to give much time to compound numbers, bank discount, stenography or Greek and little or no time to drawing. He further adds that the main object in every school should be, not to provide the children with the means of earning a livelihood, but to show them how to live a happy and worthy life inspired by ideals which exalt and dignify both labor and leisure. To see the beauty and to live it is to possess large securities for such a life.

Before our drawing department was inaugurated most of the teachers gave no time to drawing because they felt they could not teach it, but this year during the two terms' absence of the drawing supervisor, they have faithfully carried out the work according to her outline and previous directions. So the greater part of the work on exhibitions is the result of lessons given by the regular grade teachers alone. Drawing in the IXth grade, high school and special Saturday class was necessarily omitted while the supervisor was away so their exhibit represents only about seven weeks' work in hatching design and enlarged ornament. And as only one 50-minute period per week is given by the high school to drawing, some of the best work could not be completed in time for the exhibit.

Much of the manual work shown last year had to be omitted also for most teachers have little strength left for the extra after-school lessons this year requires; but the children are as enthusiastic as ever about such work and are already making designs for application during the summer.

Visitors are requested to begin with the lowest grade to inspect the exhibit so to note the gradual growth of conscious, painstaking effort from the free expression of the primary illustrations to the most studied compositions of the eighth grade.

By giving the children all three classes of drawing—representation, construction and design; they become better able to see and to know and to do. By using several different mediums of expression, pencil, ink, color, etc., they gain a certain mastery over materials and over themselves that has more than a mere commercial value.

TWO BARN BURNED.

They Were Struck by Lightning—Some Livestock Consumed.

Orwell, May 29.—A large barn on the premises of George Allen was struck by lightning Monday afternoon and totally destroyed, as was also another barn standing near.

Although help was at hand the flames spread so rapidly that several calves, a separator, and some farming tools, together with 25 tons of hay were burnt. The horses, wagons, and the year's crop of wool in the buildings were saved. The loss is partially covered by insurance.
